Why an apiary?

We see bee societies as a perfect metaphor to describe movement work. We each exist in our own colonies, focused on a common goal. We scout for resources, we protect the hive from danger, and our everyday efforts are the foundation of so many thriving gardens.

Sometimes we are so busy with our own hivework that we don't get the opportunity to "cross-pollinate" with other like-minded bees. That's the purpose of this conference: to remind Vermont's equity and justice practitioners that they are each part of a collective of collectives, and that through our strategic and inspiring leadership, we can make all the difference.
